

FROM HER DEAD LOVE MAY WINTAGE RISES.

Confession of May Wintage Leads to the Arrest of Many Men.

After Trying to Kill Herself She Tells the Police of Her Wrecked Life.

Believed She Was the Legal Wife of the Head of an Extensive Gang of Swindlers.

OPERATED IN ALL THE BIG CITIES.

Edgar Valentine, Claude Laselle, "Big Ed" Rice and "Kid" Smith Among Those Who Had Been Systematically Passing Worthless Checks.

When pretty May Wintage tried to kill herself in Brooklyn two weeks ago she put the police on the track of a gang of swindlers who, but for her act, might never have been brought to justice. As it is, six men are now in jail with long terms of imprisonment staring them in the face, and as many more are being searched for by the police. The girl was the innocent accomplice of one of the men, and through her disclosures sufficient has been learned to warrant the authorities in believing that he will be convicted.

When the Grand Jury meets in Brooklyn to-day Miss Wintage will be brought before it. She is now a prisoner in St.
Mary's Hospital, and though not fully recovered from her self-inflicted wound, will be able to give her testimony. While most of the men are wanted for forgery and similar swindles, one of them has a much more serious charge hanging over his head. This man is Edgar Valentine, whose wife May Wintage believed herself to be, and for whom she passed the many forged checks which have since been traced to him. The police would have no trouble in convicting Valentine for uttering worthless paper, but the charge which they hope to fasten upon him is of a much more serious nature. What it is they will not say.

Among the men with whom Valentine was connected are some of the best-known criminals in the country. "Big Ed" Rice, one of them, is now in the Raymond Street Jail awaiting trial on a charge of passing worthless checks. Another is Claude B.
Laselle, known to the police as one of the most dangerous forgers in the country. He, too, is under arrest, and is under indictment at Riverhead, L. I.

Met Her Fate Here.

Besides these are the forgers arrested last week—Walter B. Peters, William Herbert Connor and William Thomas. Of these Peters is locked up in Chicago, Connor in Flint, Mich., and Thomas in this city. "Kid" Smith, with many aliases, was under arrest in Goshen, N. Y., but broke jail. Then there are four or five expected forgers who have so far succeeded in evading arrest, but will probably be caught now, as Miss Wintage will give evidence against them.

Nearly two years ago Valentine left his home in Middle Village, L. I., and coming to New York, met Edgar Valentine.
He was introduced to her as a rich broker, and at once began paying her decided attention. She fell in love with him, and says that he married her, but the police say the ceremony was not a legal one, and that there is nothing to prevent her testifying against him.

For a time Valentine seemed to have plenty of money, and the girl had no reason to doubt that he was not what he claimed to be. At last he seemed to run short of cash, and whenever she asked him for money he would give her a check.
These she had cashed at some of the big stores where she made purchases, and the checks were worthless, and the police were looking for the handsome young woman who had passed them.

They did not find her for months. Then she was arrested in one of the Sixth avenue stores, where she presented a check given to her by Valentine. She sent word to him, and he was on hand in the police court when the girl was brought before him. He had money to redeem the worthless paper, and made the excuse that his bank account had run out. The girl, however, thought when he made out the check.
On this statement Miss Wintage was released.

Early last Spring he told the young woman that he had a small cottage at Long Branch, and that they would pass the Summer there. A few days later they moved to the New Jersey resort. Besides the cottage Valentine had a yacht and a pair of horses. He paid all bills in checks, giving her one whenever she asked for money.

Strange Visitors to Long Branch.

For a time she thought everything was all right. Then her suspicions were again aroused by the strange visitors who came to see Valentine. They were well-dressed men, seemed to have plenty of money, but they talked freely of having obtained it by passing checks and told of the ruses they had been forced to adopt to avoid arrest.
After their visits Valentine would hand plenty of money, and would spend it lavishly while it lasted. When funds began to run low the visitors would be supplied with checks by Valentine and would leave the place.

This had not been going on long before the young woman realized that her supposed husband's visitors were members of a gang of forgers who were being supplied with a worthless draft or check.
Among the men who went to the Long Branch cottage was one who is said to be Claude Laselle. He never took any checks from Valentine, but seemed to be a person of importance in the eyes of all the other men. He did not stay long in the seashore resort at any one time, but was continually on the road and seemed to be dodging the police.

There was another man to whom the others paid especial attention. He was thought to have been the Walter B. Peters who was arrested Friday in Chicago as the head of the gang who were passing the Western States with worthless paper for many months. He, the police say, is a man who by his skill as a lithographer made the operations of the gang so successful. He would get a check of some bank and by making a copy of it was able to supply his confederates with as many imitations as they needed.

Laselle Comes to New York.

These men were acting on a plan which originated with Laselle, and it is thought that a part of the profits of their work went to him. They were well-dressed men, seemed to have plenty of money, but
had been forced to adopt to avoid arrest.
After their visits Valentine would hand
would leave the place.

one gang of forgers. He heard that "Big Ed" Rice was in New York, and he went to see him. He came home with a note work, so he came home. Within a week Brooklyn was being flooded with worthless checks. These all bore the signature of "Walter B. Peters" and purported to be the private checks of that firm. The way of disposing of them was always the same.
A messenger boy would bring one of the checks to a grocer with a note bearing the name of one of his customers, requesting that the grocer cash the check and send the money by the boy. The police caught one of the messengers, and found that the messenger was to have been deferred to Rice. Rice escaped for a time, but was arrested in this city on a charge of passing checks, and at once taken to Brooklyn, where he was indicted for passing checks.

In the meantime Laselle had been passing some of his own checks. He gave one to a real estate man in Shelter Island and then led the police a long chase before he was caught in a hotel. He was taken to Riverhead, where an indictment had already been found against him. Then, last week, came the arrest of the three men by the police of this city.
Chicago and Flint, Mich. Of these New York will probably keep Thomas, Chicago will take Peters, and the L. I., and an-diana or Michigan authorities, and Michigan will hold Connor.

She Tired of It All.

"Kid" Smith will be wanted in almost every State in which he may be caught.
Of the other men with whom Valentine was associated not so much is known by the police. While their methods of work showed them to be experienced in disposing of worthless checks, there are no complaints against them, except in New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

It was only when May Wintage had been forced by Valentine to pass some of the worthless paper after they returned to this city and were living at No. 1300 Lexington avenue that she felt that she would rather be dead than continue her mode of Holland's New Terror of the Sub-Seas.

The new John P. Holland torpedo boat is now being built at the Crescent Ship Yards of Elizabethport, N. J., and will take her initial plunge into her element about January 15 next. She is shaped exactly like an eel, having a single four-bladed propeller, which is surrounded by four rudders that work in pairs, two vertical and two horizontal. She will be fifty feet long, with a moulded diameter of ten feet, constructed of double steel plating, arranged into four outer and four inner strakes, the plate to be seven-fifteenths of an inch in thickness at the forward end and tapers off to five-fifteenths of an inch at the sternmost plates, all double riveted. Her frames will be of "merchant" steel, 3x3 inches, and placed eighteen inches apart, and her motive power will be electricity and gas, either of which may be used separately or coupled in order to attain greater speed. Unlike all former submarine craft, she will have no superstructure, except a telescope counting tower about one foot high and three feet in diameter, and her displacement will be sixty-six tons.

Her armament will consist of guns for throwing aerial torpedoes containing 200-pound charges of high explosives, and her magazine will contain, in addition, six or seven "Whitehead" torpedoes. Her speed below the surface will be nine knots for twelve hours, or twelve knots for four hours, while being operated by electric current, and when ashore, she will develop eight knots under gas pressure. When launched, she will be fitted with a 50 horse-power gas engine, but at a later date a 300 horse-power motor will be used, which is expected to generate a speed of sixteen knots. This will be a test boat. The cost of construction will be about $75,000.

life. So, when she moved to No. 120 Ralph avenue, Brooklyn, and found that her only means of obtaining money would be by passing checks which Valentine gave her, she decided to end it all with a bullet. She tried and failed.

For her husband Miss Wintage will be released. District-Attorney Backus believing that she was an innocent tool in the hands of Valentine, and that she has suffered enough for her part in the life of the gang, she told Mr. Backus that she alone had obtained at least $1,000 on checks forged by Valentine. He was arrested one week ago, when visiting her parents in Newtown, L. I., for the purpose of trying to induce her to keep silent.

Mrs. Hampton and May Wintage.
Long Branch, N. J., Nov. 8.—It is believed that Valentine and May Wintage lived here as "Mrs. S. Hampton" and "C. R. Mc-Laughlin." Mrs. Hampton leased the cottage of Third and Garfield avenues, paying one half of the rent ($200) in advance. Mrs.
Connelly was delighted with her tenants because they did not ask for any new furniture. Mrs. Hampton claimed to be a dressmaker. Another young woman, whose name is believed to be "C. R. McLaughlin," who was present with Mrs. Hampton when the cottage was leased, claimed to be connected with the Standard Oil Company.

During the Summer many visitors called at the cottage. McLaughlin had an account with the First National Bank of this city.
Before leaving here he drew out all the money he had in the bank, but later deposited it in the bank. He did not credit it until after checks came in by the dozen. Mr.
Tehune refused to cash them.

All the checks given to Long Branch merchants were cashed on Saturday afternoon, which made it impossible for the holders to tell whether the checks were genuine and money, and by that time Mrs. Hampton was gone. A clerk in Stein-bach's store to whom she tendered a check for payment of goods purchased, and the employer's attention before giving the check. Later Steinbach learned that the check was worthless, and asked the clerk if he could recognize the woman. He saw her again. He replied in the affirmative.

After the season was over the young man accompanied by Valentine in a Brooklyn steam, where he recognized May Wintage as Mrs. Hampton, and through him the detectives were put on her track.

CITY NEWS BRIEFS.

John Sullivan, who works for Contractor Michael Redmond, and with several of his workmates, was arrested yesterday in a Brooklyn house, One Hundred and Seventy-ninth street, and charged with passing a check for $100,000.
The check was found in a box, and was signed by a man named Mike Cleary, who probably, but upon Mr. Platt depends the settlement of the question.

O'Grady's enemies declare that Aldridge is not for him, because he did not support Aldridge for the nomination for Governor.
The point is made also that O'Grady declared last session, presumably with Speaker Fish's consent, that if the Greater New York bill were passed the second time no State Commission would be provided. The Platt-Lauterbach intention was to fasten State commissions upon the city for its government, and the Fish-O'Grady pledges to the contrary rendered the carrying out of the programme impossible.

S. Fred Nixon loomed up as a candidate in much the same way Fish did several years ago. Fish was anti-Platt, so is Nixon.
Fish was made Speaker on the theory that an enemy made a friend is an enemy destroyed. Platt trusted Fish and the latter was true, except in the case of the Greater New York legislation, when he had the exercise of expediency to urge in his defence.
If Platt refuses to consider him, Nixon might rally the anti-Platt legislators, and by threatening to contest Platt's claim to the Speakership force the "easy boss" to nudge him Speaker.

Robert G. Scherer is known as "Barnes's man." William Barnes, Jr., is the Republican boss of Albany County, who led the protesting delegation at the State Convention and declared Mr. Platt would ruin the party by accepting the gubernatorial nomination. Perhaps Platt has not forgiven Mr. Barnes.

Candidates for the leadership of the Democratic minority in the Assembly are Daniel Finn, of the First District; Thomas F.
Donnelly, of the Thirty-second, and Assemblyman Norton, of Troy. New York will probably have the deciding voice, which means that John C. Sheehan will designate the leader. There is good reason to believe that Mr. Donnelly will be chosen.

Revivalist Moody Admires the Way They Reach the People.

The first of a series of religious services conducted in Carnegie Music Hall by D. J.
Moody and Mrs. D. J. Moody was held at 8 o'clock yesterday afternoon. For Sunday school and other church workers.

Mr. Sankey, as usual, did the singing.
Mr. Moody, in his exhortation, said, in part: "I would be ready to die if I could see the churches revived as the quakers have been revived during the past few years. Such a revival is what will save this country. It will be the work of the churches. During the past sixty days every family in the country has been reached by the most agitating politics. Why cannot such men be done in the cause of Christ? Over 100,000,000 of gold or silver have been scattered among the people. Suppose the same money were returned to the churches. What splendid results for religion there would be. There are 40,000,000 of people in this country who do not go to church. We must get to them when they will not come to us."

Two Open Letters From a Chicago Girl —How Happiness Came to Her.

Among the tens of thousands of women who apply to Mrs. Pinkham for advice and are cured, are many who wish the facts in their cases made public, but do not give permission to publish their names for reasons as obvious as in the following, and no name is ever published without the writer's authority; this is a bond of faith which Mrs. Pinkham has never broken.

Chicago, Jan. 5th, '95.

My dear Mrs. Pinkham—A friend of mine, Mrs.

you, because I am so much better. I Chicago, June 16th, '95.

My dear Mrs. Pinkham—This is a happy day. I am well and gaining

Just such cases as the above leak out in women's circles, and that is why the confidence of the women of America is bestowed upon Mrs. Pinkham.

Why are not physicians more candid with women suffering from such ailments?

Women want the truth, and if they cannot get it from their doctor, will seek it elsewhere.
